

FOR THE FARMER.
Drying and Preserving Apples.

Drying and preserving apples is now in order, and we advise those who have a supply of this fruit, which cannot be marketed, to dry as many as possible. There will be a demand for them, not only in cities and villages, and in new sections of the country where bearing trees are not yet secured, but also in many localities where the crop has failed. Remember that it pays to prepare and dry the fruit carefully. Clean, well-pared, well-cored, and carefully dried apples sell for double the price of those poorly prepared. Two shillings worth of time and care in preparing a bushel, will not unfrequently add a dollar, or more, to its marketable value. Apples may be quickly dried by shaving them wholly into thin parings, on any common parer, and spreading them upon plates or earthenware dishes to dry. "Apple leather," as it is sometimes called, is a convenient article. It is made by preparing the fruit as if for sauce, and then, after cooking, spreading it thinly on earthen dishes, and drying it in the hot sun, or in ovens kept at so low a temperature as to avoid all danger of scorching. The thin dried sheets thus prepared will keep a long time in a dry room, and be ready for use whenever they are wanted by simply soaking them.

For home use, we have lately preserved our apples in air-tight bottles and cans. The fresh apples are pared, cored, cooked, and seasoned ready for the table, then put hot into the bottles, and corked and sealed. This we find better, by far, and even cheaper, than the dried fruit; and it has the advantage of being always ready for use—six or twelve months after putting up.—American Agriculturist.

Wheat After Corn Without Plowing.

Mr. C. M. Kees, Calhoun co., Mich., writing to the Agriculturist, gives the following account of a method lately followed by him in sowing winter wheat, which he says is becoming quite common in that section. The ground is plowed thoroughly and deeply in the spring, for the corn crop. This is carefully tilled throughout the summer, principally by the cultivator, an occasional plowing and hoeing being also given, if necessary, to keep the weeds down. When the time arrives for sowing the wheat, if the corn is ripe enough and help is plenty, three or four rows are cut off, the stalks set on one side, and the strip thus cleared is sowed and harrowed in. The stalks are then set back upon the open space, and another "land" cleared, the stalks being put on the "land" already sowed, and so on until the field is all sowed. If the corn is not fit to cut, or help is scarce, the wheat is put in with a cultivator going twice in a row each way. One man will sow as fast as two can cultivate it. About two bushels of seed per acre are used. Mr. K. says the average yield of wheat is not quite so large, but the labor involved is much less.

This method may be expedient in rare cases, but it is hardly to be commended for general introduction. The more mellow and thoroughly prepared the seed bed, the better will be the yield. The space left where the rows of corn stood will be infested with weeds, which will grow up with the wheat the following spring.—Am. Agriculturist.

Value of Ashes.

On the 25th of last April, I planted one half acre of potatoes on ground that had been manured and broken up a short time previous. The potatoes were dropped in the first four rows, and the ashes applied by the handful to the hill at the rate of fourteen bushels to the acre, and then covered as usual. The next four rows were not ashed; the same alternation was continued through the whole piece. During the growth of the vines, the appearance was decidedly in favor of the ashed rows. The "big" struck them the 6th of August. On the 3d of October, I dug eight rows; the four which were ashed yielded six bushels, and the four which were not ashed yielded three bushels, and those from the ashed rows much superior in quality. This gave three bushels of potatoes for one of ashes. Potatoes are now worth from 37 1/2 to 50 cents per bushel.—Perhaps I should observe that the kind planted is known in these "diggings" by the name of "Door-yards." There was not a dozen rotten ones in either case.—Genesee Farmer.

MANURE.—The sweepings of a blacksmith's shop, where charcoal is used and horses shod, are excellent for manure.—Everything of a bony or bony substance is of great value. So woolen rags, old boots and shoes, hair, wool, and feathers should all be carefully saved, and put into the compost heap. Dirt under buildings, particularly under barns and stables, is often worth more per load than the droppings and straw in the stable or manure pile. Take up the floors, and dig it out. It is excellent.

TO GET RID OF RATS.—The Griffin (Ga.) Empire State says that a lady in that city, whose house became so infested with these troublesome vermin, gives the simple remedy of dissolving coppers in water, (making it strong,) and sprinkle it in the most prominent place; it will make them leave at a two-forty rate, and no mistake. She tried it successfully, and has not been troubled with rats or mice since. It is simple, and it will not cost much to try it.

WIT AND WISDOM.

Laugh and grow fat.
Creditors and poor relations never call at the right moment.
The young woman who was "driven to distraction," now fears that she will have to walk back.

Ah, said a dotting old father to his wicked son, I fear you will bring my poor gray wig with sorrow to the grave.

A lady may be expected to make a great noise in the world when she has her dress covered with bugles.

An oyster's mouth is certainly very ugly, but sometimes has a more beautiful pearl in it than the handsomest mouth of the loveliest woman.

Lady Mary Wortly Montague used to say that the only thing which reconciled her to being a woman was that she would never be obliged to marry one.

Speaking of a tiresome young lady, Cousin Jerry observes that she has nothing of originality about her, unless it may happen to be "original sin."

Mr. Jones writes to a friend, and closes by saying: "I am glad to be able to say that my wife is recovering slowly."

There is a man in Algiers who tells such good stories that his friends say it is dangerous to walk with him in the forests, for all the hyenas come round him to laugh.

A genius once undertook to name and classify the different sorts of fools in this world.

"First, the ordinary fool; second, the fool who is one and don't know it; third, the fool who is not satisfied with being a fool in reality, but undertakes, in addition, to play the fool."

FLESH COLOR.
A country merchant once—an honest wight, Who loved a joke more than the light— Was called on fiercely by a negress, Who looked as wild as any tigris, For "some stockings, good flesh-colored."

The merchant smiled and looked awayward, Then handed down a box—and there, alack! Were stockings, sure—but they were black!

It is stated, on the authority of some persons just returned from Pike's Peak, that Gen. Larimer attempted to climb to the top of the peak, and when within about six feet of the top, the point broke off in the general's arms, and the general and the peak rolled down to the foot of the peak together. The general was badly bruised, but the peak was not seriously injured.

General Zaremba had a very long Polish name. The king having heard of it, one day asked him good-humoredly,—"Pray, Zaremba, what is your name?" The General repeated to him immediately the whole name.

"Why," said the king, "the devil himself never had such a name." "I should presume not, sir," replied the General, "as he was no relation of mine."

BORROWING.—It is oftentimes difficult to borrow money, but as a general thing, it is easier to borrow than to pay. He is a clever chap who made the following rejoinder:

"Hawkins, if you will pay down the principal of what you owe me, I will throw off the interest; or, if you will pay up the interest, the principal can remain." "To tell you the plain truth, Dobbins, it is against my principle to pay the interest, and against my interest to pay the principal."

Hawkins was "mum," and opened not his mouth.

A wag entered a store in London, some few years ago, which had for its sign two baboons, and addressing himself to the proprietor, said:

"I wish to see your partner." "I have no partner, sir." "I beg your pardon, sir. Hope you will excuse the mistake."

"O, no harm done, sir; but what made you think there was two of us?" "Your sign—the two baboons!" A titter from the ladies in the store—wag bolts in double quick time—"baboon" leaps the counter and takes after him—no go; wag too far ahead.

QUEER LAKE IN JAVA.—There is a queer lake in Java, which a traveller thus describes:—It was, perhaps, hardly half a mile in circumference, situated in a dense forest, and surrounded by trees of a giant growth, whose shade it was, most likely, that imparted to its waters a tint almost deeper than that of the sky, and at the depth of six or seven fathoms, or even more, every object to the smallest particle of weed was seen as distinctly as though held in the hand. It had, however, another peculiarity, that probably did not imply to the atmosphere of the crater, that the rays of light struck in it in such a way as to give a false position to everything below the surface, and fishes that you thought quite close and immediately under you, would remain not only unharmed but even undismayed by a dart of your lance, and though you might keep on repeating at each attempt, "I'll have you this time, though," a cool "don't you wish?" on the calm countenance of the attacked, after each futile endeavor to carry out your threat, was the invariable response. When a bather was immersed in the lake, you saw nothing of him but his head and feet, reminding you of the figures of Chinese criminals, as displayed on cups and saucers, when you are favored with a front view of the unhappy wretches, resting on their hams with their chins on their knees.
